Pressure to part ways with private company

Windsor: Campaign group calls on residents to hold council accountable

By James Bagley
Local Democracy Reporter

Pressure for the council to part ways from a private enforcement company is mounting as campaigners plan to 'cause as much fuss as possible'.

A campaign group called 'Expose District Enforcement tactics and methods in RBWM' have called on residents to send emails to the council and demand them to cancel their contract with the company.

District Enforcement was appointed on a short-term basis by the Royal Borough in October 2020 to police littering and other environmental crime, such as fly-tipping.

The company has been under fire from councillors and residents on the way they conduct their business and have been accused of making a quick buck by targeting people who drop cigarettes or rubbish rather than tackle fly-tippers.

These claims were denied by District Enforcement at a communities overview and scrutiny panel in February 2021.

In one instance, a Windsor man contacted the Local Democracy Reporting Service (LDRS) saying he was slapped with a £200 fine by District Enforcement for placing a small Amazon package into a big box next to the Windsor Leisure Centre skip.

According to figures provided by the private firm at the meeting, 1,309 fines were issued as of December 31, 2020 – with 1,185 of them being littering offences.

John Webb, who is spearheading the campaign, told the LDRS he and other supporters are going to 'cause as much fuss as possible' for the Royal Borough to cancel the contract or not to extend it by sending 'pre-written' emails to the council.

Mr Webb said the borough needs to take a different approach to litter enforcement, calling the company's method 'highway robbery' for targeting cigarette smokers.

He said: "The proportion is always about the cigarette butts and that's because it's profit-driven, where they can get their money."

"It's not about keeping the borough clean, it's about sustaining business for a private enforcement company. They [District Enforcement] have this remit where they're supposed to be doing fly-tipping and general litter, but if you look at the numbers on it, 81 per cent of all the fines are cigarette butts because it's easy picking."

Mr Webb, who said he has not been fined by the company, added money from the fines should not go to a private company based in Liverpool.

In response, a council spokesman said District Enforcement is 'fully accountable' to the local authority for its actions and is reviewed monthly and will make recommendations whether to carry on with the contract in the future.

They said: "Council officers have witnessed District Enforcement at work and the company's professionalism was of the highest order. The council is determined to address residents' concerns about litter and will continue to take a robust approach."

"Littering in our borough is wrong and damaging to the environment and will not be accepted."

High Street shop applies for alcohol licence

Licensing and a planning application are among the items in this week's public notices.

Licensing

A premises licence is being sought by The Tuck Shop in Burnham High Street.

The application is for the sale of alcohol off-premises between 9am and 11pm seven days a week.

More details can be found on the Buckinghamshire Council website.

Comments on the application must be made by June 29.

Planning

An application has been put forward detailing some of the specifics of the plan to regenerate the former AkzoNobel site in Wexham Road, Slough, into 1,000 new homes and commercial space.

The application for reserved matters seeks to finalise the appearance including the layout and landscaping for the first phase of the commercial floor space – a data centre with car parking.

Each week, the Express publishes public notices containing important information affecting the community you live in. These statutory notices help keep the wider public informed about key issues, from plans to develop a block of flats in your neighbourhood to an application by your local bar or pub to serve alcohol for longer.
